LEHI CITY

LEADERSHIP MESSAGE

November reminds us to slow down, reflect on what matters most, and to appreciate the people who make our lives meaningful. As I think about what I'm most grateful for, the people of Lehi are near the top of my list.

Six years ago, I moved to Lehi, recently divorced and navigating a new chapter with two young children. Over the years that followed, as I worked to rebuild my neighbors and this community stood beside me. I can sincerely say that I would not be the person I am today without the friends and neighbors whose kindness and generosity have shaped my life and shown me what it truly means to belong.

Those experiences have taught me that family and community look different for everyone. Some families are large, others are small. Some are connected by generations of tradition, while others are built through friendships and the people who become family along the way. Just as every family is unique, so are the seasons of life we experience. Some seasons allow us to be actively involved in our community, while others leave little time beyond work, family, and daily responsibilities. No matter what your family looks like or what season of life you find yourself in, at the heart of our community is a simple truth: Every resident matters and every household is an important part of Lehi.

Lehi's Family Week, November 22–28, celebrates not only our families, but also the sense of family we create as a community. Through activities such as mini-golf, service projects, and supporting our local businesses, I encourage you to connect with the friends and neighbors who make Lehi feel like home.

This Thanksgiving, I'm especially grateful for the people who have shown up for me and my children, often in ways they may never fully realize. My hope is that we continue to show up for one another, recognizing that the kindness we extend today can make a lasting difference in someone's tomorrow.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Library Resource Spotlight

Have you heard of Universal Class? Universal Class is an online learning resource available free through the library! Patrons can take hundreds of self-paced courses on topics like computers and technology, business, writing, health, crafts, personal development, and more. Many courses offer continuing education units (CEUs) and certificates of completion.

Learn something new, anytime, from anywhere!

Want to learn more? Ask a librarian or visit our website for all the details!

Radon Testing Kits

Check Your Home for Radon!

Radon is a colorless, odorless radioactive gas that can seep into homes from the ground. You can't see or smell it, so testing is the only way to know if it's there.

Check out a FREE radon testing kit from the library!

Place one on hold through our website or ask at any circulation desk to learn more.
