- Rental Assistance. FEMA Rental Assistance may be available if you can't safely live in your home because of the August 2026 disaster. This assistance can help you secure temporary housing while your home is being repaired or replaced. Apply for assistance, and FEMA will work with you to determine the assistance to best meet your housing needs. FEMA rental assistance is decided on a case-by-case basis. If you were initially approved for rental assistance, an application for continued temporary housing assistance will be mailed to you 15 days after the grant is approved. If you do not receive one, contact FEMA by calling 800-621-3362.

- Home inspections. A FEMA housing inspector will call from an 'unknown number.' If you have applied for assistance, expect a call within about 10 days to schedule your home inspection. They will try several times to reach you. An inspector will never ask for your nine-digit registration number, always wear an official government badge to identify themselves and never ask for bank information. FEMA never charges a fee for an inspection.

- Duplication of benefits. By law, FEMA cannot duplicate benefits received from another source. If applicants receive money from another source for a specific disaster-related expense they may not be able to receive FEMA aid for the same expense. However, if applicants exhaust assistance from another source, and there is a continuing need, FEMA may be able to help.

- Beware of fraud. After a disaster, scam artists often attempt to take advantage of disaster survivors. Don't trust someone who asks for money. FEMA, U.S. Small Business Administration, and other federal agencies will never charge applicants for disaster assistance or help in filling out applications.
